

SpringBoard Member
July 2018 – Present

Matthew J. Camp is Director of Government Relations for Teachers College, Columbia University, where he coordinates College advocacy to city, state, and federal officials. In addition to Springboard, Matt is a board member of Community Board 9 in Manhattan and the Morningside Area Alliance, volunteers as an SAT, GED, and ESL teacher.

Previously, he was state government liaison for Princeton University and worked for two U.S. Senators. He is a PhD candidate in Politics & Education at Columbia University, received an MA in Public Policy from the Bloustein School at Rutgers and was a Governor's Executive Fellow at the Eagleton Institute of Politics. He received a BA from the University of Delaware, double majoring in political science and psychology. He enjoys yoga and punk rock.