Improving Academic Achievement

705

students who were behind in credits re-engaged in school and earned their high school diplomas.

94%

of families receiving services through our Prevention programs stayed together and were not involved in abuse or neglect cases.

Our Work and Commitment

Through a network of strategically located youth and family development, child welfare, and educational support programs, Good Shepherd seeks to expand the geography of opportunity in New York City. All Good Shepherd programs integrate evidence-informed youth and family development strategies and trauma-informed practices. Our holistic, strength-based approach is designed to increase safety, promote belonging, and build individual skills and community assets.
